New CITI Program Course Evaluations

With the start of the new academic year, the CITI Program is implementing a revised course evaluation program. With the evaluation, we aim to continuously improve our course content, thereby enhancing each learner's experience.

As always, learners are invited to provide optional course feedback upon completing a course via the Post-Course Evaluation Survey. In addition, learners will now also be invited to complete a brief Pre-Course Assessment just prior to beginning a course. This optional pre-assessment will provide us with important baseline information regarding learners' pre-existing content knowledge. The University of Miami IRB has determined that this evaluation of the CITI Program's content is not human subjects research.

We value our learners' time and feedback, and appreciate your continued support in helping us improve the CITI Program. Remember that all learners always have the option to decline participation in either the Pre-Course Assessment or Post-Course Evaluation Survey—neither one is necessary for a learner to complete his or her course or to access a Completion Report.

If you have any questions or concerns about these changes, please do not hesitate to contact the CITI Program Research Department at citiresearch@med.miami.edu.
